The Battle for Bismarck

The battle for the city of Bismarck began on the morning of the third week. The undead horde, led by the necromancer known as The Lich, attacked the city from all sides. The survivors, led by the former mayor of Bismarck, John Smith, fought bravely, but they were outnumbered and outmatched. By the end of the day, the undead had overrun the city and the survivors were forced to retreat.

The Arrival of the Refugees

The battle for Bismarck had a devastating impact on the surrounding area. Thousands of people were killed or turned into undead. Those who survived fled to the countryside, where they hoped to find safety. Many of these refugees made their way to the town of Deadwood, which was one of the few remaining safe havens in the region.

Thousands of people fled their homes in the wake of the undead invasion.

The Growing Threat of the Undead

The undead horde that attacked Bismarck was not the only threat facing the survivors. In the weeks since the outbreak, the undead had been multiplying at an alarming rate. They were now spreading out across the countryside, attacking isolated farms and settlements. The survivors were running out of time and they needed to find a way to stop the undead before it was too late.

What's Next?

The third week of Dead America Bismarck Pt ended with the survivors facing a grave threat. The undead horde was growing stronger and the refugees were arriving in droves. The survivors needed to find a way to stop the undead and protect the refugees. What will happen next? Tune in next week to find out!
