The Polish national anthem, Mazurek Dąbrowskiego, is a patriotic song that has been sung by Poles since the late 18th century. The song was written by Józef Wybicki in 1797, during the Kościuszko Uprising against Russian rule. The song quickly became popular among Polish soldiers and civilians, and it has remained the national anthem of Poland to this day.

Mazurek Dąbrowskiego is a lively and uplifting song, with a simple melody that is easy to sing and play. The song is typically performed in a march tempo, and it is often accompanied by drums and other instruments. The lyrics of the song are about the Polish people's struggle for independence and freedom, and they express the hope that one day Poland will be free from foreign rule.
